What thread count?

The thread count is the number of threads in each square inch of cotton bedding and generally speaking, the higher the thread count, the more luxurious, dense and soft the product will feel. The quality of the yarn is also very important in the feel of the product, so thread count alone does not always tell the whole story.

150-180	This range is most suitable for seasonal rentals and domestic use - the type often found in hospitals, and certainly good for a spare room and where the usage calls for material of a more basic nature.
200	A very cool and light percale cotton, mostly used in summer. Found in many hotels, this product is ideal for contract or domestic usage where the requirement is for cool crisp bed linen within a certain budget.
300 Polycotton	This provides the feel of top quality cotton – but with the convenience of easy-care polycotton. The thread count is high for polycotton so the product will feel good and last for a long time.
400 and 500	Definitely our best selling cotton products. A soft yet more substantial Egyptian cotton percale than the 200 count, favoured for its cool feel and durability, with a universal appeal. These products are what you would expect to find on the beds of major hotel chains worldwide.
600	Here is where the exclusive end of quality begins, made possible by the use of compressed air technology in the weaving process. It is a beautiful lustrous, uniform and very smooth fabric. The best selling luxury cotton in our upper range.
800-1,000	Ultimate luxury, pure indulgence, a step above the 600 thread count with an even greater lustre and a fuller fabric. This is an amazingly robust yet silky weave and will always be considered to be very beautiful bed linen even after many years.

What is GSM?

GSM stands for Grams per Square Metre which is a measure of the density of the cotton used in producing towels. Generally speaking the higher the GSM the softer and more luxurious the towel. However, any towel of 450 GSM and above will meet the demands of a quality hotel in terms of feel and longevity.
