

Teachers

"I never teach my pupils, I only attempt to provide the condition in which they can learn"
Albert Einstein

After many years of working in schools, it still amazes me how dedicated and committed teachers are to the cause. The cause being to inspire young minds to achieve and succeed.

Regardless of what is going on outside of the school gates they turn up and put the needs of others before their own. Selfless to a fault in some cases. They really do have my total admiration.

Many of the young people I worked with had a favourite teacher... this one person was often the only adult in their lives who believed in them. This in some cases was the only reason they came to school, the only reason they trusted and the only reason, in some cases, that they chose to live.

The impact of a teacher's actions and words matter.

A lot.

It is imperative that teachers are in the best frame of mind whilst working with all young people, not just those that have been identified as vulnerable.

If the joy, excitement, possibilities, drive, hope has disappeared, it is time to do something about it.

Remember why you joined the teaching profession in the first place.

Not just your future lies in your hands!

Jepeca has worked with many teachers over the years... thoughts, feelings and emotions are just as important to you as they are to the young people you work with!

The tools and techniques you find on this website work for both young people and adults... 95% significant change is scientifically proven, and freely shared in the knowledge that together we can make a HUGE difference.

You are welcome to share this website with someone you know who may be struggling or with colleagues to help a vulnerable young person.

You are welcome to use the free material provided on this website but if you wish to discuss specific issues then drop me a mail info@jepeca.com I may be able to help virtually!

I don't bite but I do expect coffee! ☺