Our Supply Chains

Our supply chains mainly include contracts and licences for the provision of data and IT services in respect of our core business of providing data and information services. As such, our supply chain is largely for the provision of 'services' rather than manufactured goods. Due to the industry that we operate in the risk of modern slavery within our supply chains is considered low. Nevertheless, we take modern slavery and human trafficking seriously, which is why we are developing policies as further explained below.

Our policies on slavery and human trafficking

We are committed to ensuring that there is no modern slavery or human trafficking in our supply chains or in any part of our business. We are reviewing our policies in this area to ensure that they reflect our commitment to acting ethically and with integrity in all our business relationships.

Due diligence processes for slavery and human trafficking

As part of our initiative to identify and mitigate risk we are reviewing current practices with a view to implement and enforce effective systems and controls to ensure slavery and human trafficking are not taking place anywhere in our supply chains.

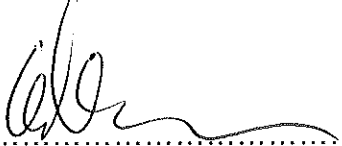

Training

We are undertaking reviews to assess whether training is required for certain staff on the risks of modern slavery and human trafficking in our supply chains.

Our effectiveness in combating slavery and human trafficking

We will review our commitments highlighted in this statement on an annual basis, in order to assess whether our current policies and procedures are adequate to ensure that slavery and human trafficking is not taking place in any part of our business or supply chains.

This statement is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes our Group's slavery and human trafficking statement for the financial year ending 31 December 2017.
