

We wanted to develop the children's sense of responsibility, and sense of self-value in more meaningful ways. Our 12 months Planner challenges us to set up cross-room activities (play-dates) with the Tweenies and the Babies. Here is an examples of this.

and sense of self-value in more meaningful ways. activities (play-dates) with the Tweenies and the Babies.

The Babies' ICT toys have stopped working. Can we help? We collect them and set to work! Concentration is high as we work out the 'why'.

Cross-Curriculum learning through Play-Dates

Babies, you're welcome ☺

Meditation

Yoga

We want nursery to be fun and interesting...we consider variation every day.

Watching the Queen's speech live

Letting off steam when the British weather is unforgiving

We plan for the unplanned...the child-initiated activities. Here is how.

We noticed that ----- was very interested in the Dinosaurs book.

We bring this up at Reflection Circle and leave the idea with the children

...they decide to build a dinosaur habitat in place of the Home Corner.

The children come up with their own activities to plan for, and we encourage them to write these down in our Weekly Planner.