THE PRIME MINISTER

I am very pleased to congratulate the British Metals Recycling Association on its centenary year.

Recycling makes an important contribution to the UK economy and to the environment. Metals recycling in particular has helped to ensure that we can build our manufacturing economy and export materials, for which extraction from the earth would have had a significant economic and environmental cost.

I am also grateful for the valuable contributions that your Association has made to the development of Government policy over the years. In particular, your input to recycling and waste policy including matters related to end-of-life vehicles and the Government's Resources and Waste strategy. This document sets out our ambition to be a world leader in resource efficiency, resource productivity and competitiveness, and I am sure the work of the BMRA will be at the forefront of that ambition.

Your centenary year marks an important milestone for your members and for the industry as a whole. You should be proud of this achievement and the contribution you have made over the last 100 years both to our economy and to the strength of our global trade.
