ESOS

ESOS - Phase Two

ESOS phase one might have only just passed, but you can also benefit from looking at Phase two now.

December 2019 is the deadline for Phase Two compliance, but any energy survey or audit carried out between now and then would meet the compliance.

There was a rush to meet the Environment Agency deadline for ESOS compliance at the end of 2015 year with lead assessors having too much work to deliver. Don't wait for this to happen again.

What's the benefit to doing it now?

IE can offer an appealing discount for anyone who signs up to our Early ESOS service. You will benefit from the discount service today and avoid inflated assessor costs that are likely to hit as the next deadline approaches.

Sign up for your audit now and you can also look at benefit from the cost savings identified as part of the assessment.

You'll be risk free and compliant well in time and avoid the risk of fines from the Environment Agency.

The offer?

We will deliver audits on your building and transport within the next year. The energy data that is required will need to include a period including 31st December 2018, so we'll complete the final group report during the first months of 2019.

Our fixed fee is costed at current rates and will remain in place to cover the final works in 2018/19.

All we ask is that you:

- Complete the attached questionnaire to obtain a fee proposal and secure the discounted rate
- Place an order with us before 1st July 2016
- Provide the energy and property information in

Inspired
Efficiency

- relation to your organisation to support the audits
- Provide full energy data for 2018 by the end of January 2019

How can we make this discount to you?

We have already worked with over 50 organisations and completed the necessary reports for ESOS Phase One. This gives us an advantage in understanding a wide variety of organisations. We want you to benefit from these reports and be rewarded by gaining from the energy and cost savings that are identified sooner rather than later.

Take advantage today!

IE is flexible in its approach; one size does not fit all in terms of both practical measures or ways of engaging. If you just need a few hours of expert advice to steer you in the right direction or you need to fill a longer term role to deliver a programme over years IE can adapt to fit you and your needs.
