49%

have retained the rights to access a former employer's network after leaving the company

and a further 17% do not know if they have

49%

17%

65%

of those who retained network access rights have basic network access

and 22% retain administrator rights

65%

22%

76%

of those who retained
a former employer's network rights did make use of these rights

*and more than 6 in 10 did so more than once

Only 16%

of those who retained access to a former employer's network said their employer realised they accessed the network and removed their access while 57% realised but did not have their access removed

16%

57%

10%

report that their former employer did not take back any hardware they were provided for access (e.g. laptop, phone, VPN)

10%

At least

3/4

agree that network access rights should be:

- easier to manage (83%)
- better monitored (80%)
- given a higher priority and focus of attention (76%)