On Line Newsletter

CI-01 on line

Well we suffered some setbacks along the way, but now we can report that the Basic Crime & Intelligence Analysis Course is imminently available on line, full registration to be available within the next seven to ten days.

This is an introductory course in Crime & Intelligence Analysis. The course presents material which describes the process of crime & intelligence analysis at a basic level. The role of the analyst and analysis is reviewed and the analysis process is examined. Some of the tools which analysts use are also introduced.

We appreciate that a number of people have been waiting a while for this course, and we are grateful to those of you that have shown patience with us during this time.

It is always difficult to get new ideas off the ground, ours was made much harder with the departure of one of our senior partners so early on. We needed to continue with writing our classroom based courses and also the on-line Xanalys course, which incidentally was launched back in April.

Other courses from our portfolio are at various stages of completion, we hope to bring them on line in the not too distant future.

So those of you that have been waiting so long, now is the time to book your place

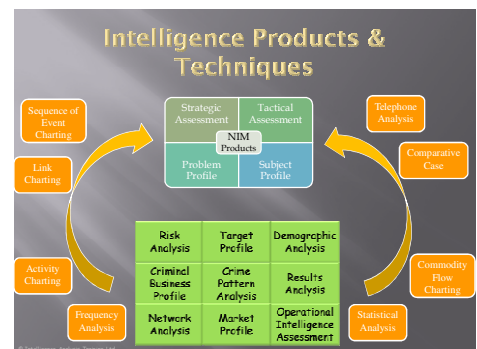

If you have not done so already, please Register your interest and we will e-mail details of how to obtain your login.

Analysis

TRAINING MATERIAL EXTRACTS:

Crime Analysis & Criminal Intelligence Analysis are different but related aspects of analysis. Whilst they can and do exist as separate functions within an agency, it is a mistake to think that they are wholly independent, each has the potential to inform the other.
