PRESS RELEASE

New Medical Tubing Line from Labtech

Working with a European partner with experience and expertise in designing and producing extrusion lines for medical tubing, Labtech can now supply the market with fully professional medical tubing lines, built under license, incorporating all the latest technologies.

The Labtech Scientific medical tubing lines can be supplied in many configurations and using many extruder sizes depending on diameter of tubing and required output. Where tolerances are critical, the extruders can be equipped with a gear pump which will ensure a very precise and constant resin flow to the die.

Downstream the lines have a cooling and calibration tank in different sizes, with vacuum available, plus a hauloff and cutting unit designed for cutting soft and semi-rigid tubing for typical medical applications. The hauloff unit has a touch screen to set speed and cutting lengths and is also equipped with a dimension controller and recorder which is connected in closed loop to the extruder.

After the cutting station the tube lengths will be collected on an outfeed and stacking conveyor which enables tubes to be stored and packaged in predefined batches.

Millmerran Research and Manufacturing Ltd is the exclusive UK agent for the Labtech range of laboratory processing equipment. These machines are based on over 30 years experience and are built with a modern and pleasing design and a multitude of advanced features and safety standards in accordance with CE and other international norms, and every machine has the design, build quality and finish that have become recognised as the Labtech hallmark.
