OVERVIEW

In Japan

Product: Medical*Online

- started in 2001
- includes over 1,000 Medical Journals
- also serves medical related information such as medicine and medical products since 2011

Customers:

- University
- Technical College
- Research Institute
- Hospital
- Healthcare Company
- More than 1,000 institutions

Outside Japan

Product: Medical*Online-E (Version 2.0)

- started in 2008
- renewed in 2014
- includes 760 journals and over 1.3 million of articles all in English
- equipped translation tool to help users read original text in English and other languages
- compatible with EndNote

Customers:

- United States
- Hong Kong
- Singapore
- Korea

Background of Renewal

Medical Online-E had been serving 130 thousand medical articles originally written in English. Meanwhile, other 1.3 million articles in its database had remained in Japanese. -- Medical professionals outside Japan have been missing the opportunities to access qualified content.

In renewed version of Medical*Online-E, you can discover highly-qualified medical articles from the sources that have been remaining untapped by English-speaking world and Asian countries.

Title: Nuclear Medicine as Application of Nuclear for Medicine Its Progress and Expansion
 Subtitle:
 Authors: Toyu KAKIHARA
 Authors (Kanji):
 Organization: Nuclear Medicine and PET Center, Hyogo College of Medicine
 Journal: ACTA MEDICA HYOGOENSIS
 Volume: 37
 Number: 2
 Page: 1-10
 Year/Month: 2013 / 2
 Article: Report
 Publisher: Medical Society of Hyogo College of Medicine

Progress and expansion of nuclear medicine from 1970s to present results were described. In diagnostic imaging devices, scintillation cameras, and SPECT and PET scanner were developed. Radiopharmaceuticals, β -ray emitter ^{131}I , etc) were replaced by non- β -ray and short half-life ^{18}F , ^{123}I , etc). Using these progresses, we developed scintigraphy, peroral or oral portal scintigraphy, etc. Furthermore, development of SPECT/CT and PET/CT enables useful diagnosis and treatment.
