Why is training required?

Health and Safety legislation expects every employer to provide all necessary information, instruction, training and supervision for staff.

The Management of Health and Safety at work Regulations 1999 and the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 requires all staff to be trained in the use of fire fighting equipment and the procedures for evacuation.

Fire Wardens and deputies should be appointed and receive training in marshalling and evacuation. In a large operation it may be appropriate to have structured fire precaution measures. For instance it may be appropriate to support Wardens with Marshals who meet and greet staff at the Assembly Point and have Extinguisher operators who tackle the fire if safe to do so.

We always emphasise that portable fire extinguishers are 'first aid' appliances and stress that the Fire Brigade should be contacted in the event of a fire, and of course that the first priority is the safety of employees, visitors and contractors.

Our training

We specialise in bespoke fire safety training courses, delivered in a relaxed, informal style, and designed to protect your people and premises while helping you comply with current legislation.

We understand that every client is different. Different businesses, different premises, different needs and that's why we tailor our fire safety training courses to your particular needs.

Whatever those needs happen to be, from basic fire safety awareness training through to Fire Warden training, you can be sure that every course is designed to be interesting and engaging.

Staff fire training schedule

Our staff fire awareness and fire fighting equipment training course will be carried out at your premises for groups of up to ten people per session, the course will last between 2 to 3 hours in total.

The course will begin with an informal classroom session where staff will be issued with an individual copy of the training manual. From this our training representative will cover the following areas:-

- Awareness of relevant legislation and changes made through the introduction of the RRFSO.
 - Fire prevention and the main causes of fire.
 - Action to take in the event of fire.
 - Fighting different kinds of fire.
 - Correct fire extinguisher selection.
 - Correct operation of modern fire extinguishers.
 - Questions will be encouraged throughout the talk and also at the end if staff feel uncertain on any points.
 - Question and multiple choice answer sheet may be issued to each candidate for completion.
 - Practical use training in a non-live fire scenario to give all candidates the experience of use of each type of unit.
- At the end of the course each candidate will receive a certificate of completion.

Fire Warden and Marshall training

This includes all areas covered within the awareness training but as companies with larger workforce and premises may require fire wardens, this course covers:-

- The responsibility of the Fire Warden and Marshal.
- The role of the fire warden
- Fire warden duties
- Fire evacuation drill
- Assembly point management
