Luxurious mix of materials with Mark Taylor Design

This bespoke French-inspired vanity unit, designed and made by Mark Taylor Design, is hand painted in Squid Ink by Paint & Paper Library

British manufacturer of superlative bespoke furniture, Mark Taylor Design is renowned for using high-quality materials and combining them to create spectacular spaces that exceed every client's expectations.

Capturing the warmth and beauty of wood, this beautiful, bespoke, freestanding vanity unit takes centre stage in one of the bathrooms in a five-bedroom Buckinghamshire house in the countryside. Featuring oak frames and waterproof plywood panels hand painted in Squid Ink by Paint & Paper Library to highlight the timber grain, this elegant, French-inspired vanity unit was created by Mark Taylor Design director Mark Taylor, who seamlessly incorporated the client's existing cabinet handles into his design.

“The client had already purchased the rolltop bath, handmade tiles and round, under-mounted basins,” explains Mark Taylor. “They were looking for a vanity unit that resembled a freestanding piece of furniture which would complement a traditional bathroom. I kept the detailing simple so that the unit didn't overpower the distinctive panelling in the room and the unit itself has a French-inspired, classic look with simple legs reaching to the ground.”

The under-mounted his 'n' her basins, which are complemented by Classic Lefroy Brooks mixers with ceramic indices and Edwardian towel rail, complete the understated, elegant effect. He adds: “Because of the constraints on the width of the bathroom, we had to ensure the under-mounted basins fitted with minimal tolerance to keep the unit as small as possible.”
