Planning has been granted for a series of timber workspace 'hides' on the Harwell Campus in Oxfordshire. The Harwell Campus is a science, technology and innovation campus with close ties to Oxford University.

The hides will provide tranquil workspaces overlooking an existing lagoon which offer alternative work or meeting spaces away from the conventional work environment. Each pavilion is clad in angled facets of timber cladding and mirrored glass and will each offer a distinct working environment.

The pavilions will be constructed offsite using SIP panels to reduce the impact on the ecology of the site.
