

CHIEF METEOROLOGIST
JUSTIN LILES

STORM TEAM

When sunshine turns to 10" of lake effect snow, or when the winds shift off the lake and the temperature drop 40° in ten minutes, the WDIO Storm Team will have you prepared.

Chief Meteorologist Justin Liles grew up outside of Duluth, but always had his eye on Lake Superior. "Northland weather has been my passion for nearly three decades. I've studied all of the major weather events in recent memory. Studying past storms helps me identify Northland weather trends. When elements of previous storms start lining up the same way, I can forecast what's coming."

Having grown up in Arizona, you'd think Good Morning Northland meteorologist Taylor Dayton would be wary of Northland winters. You couldn't be more wrong. "Anytime I know a snowstorm is coming, I wait up like a kid at Christmas-time waiting for the first snowflakes to fall. I might not be getting much sleep now that I live in a place that gets more than 80 inches of snow in an average year!"

His love for science, fascination with weather, passion for performing, and frankly, his last name, all pointed Brandon Weathers toward meteorology. "Honestly, back in high school, I joked about being a meteorologist because of my last name, but it actually made a lot of sense. Science has always been my favorite subject, and a fascination with numbers led me to tracking things like record temperatures and consecutive days below freezing as a nerdy hobby. So before long, the career path changed from a joke to a dream!"

With the WDIO Storm Team, you have a team of experienced meteorologists working together, to give you the most accurate forecast. They're here when you need them. Any time, on any screen.
