This photograph is of a static caravan. They come in various shapes and sizes but are fixed on site. We have been called in on occasion to investigate dampness and stability problems.

We examine a number of motor homes each year, some of which may be conversions from commercial vehicles. However, even when the conversion is done by commercial specialists, problems can arise. One slightly spectacular case arose when Ted Allen entered the accommodation section of a motor home and experienced the collapse of a ceiling mounted television which fell on his head.
