Pennine Lancashire Community Launches Redesigned Website

Burnley Pennine (20/03/2017) —Pennine Lancashire Community Farm today announced the launch of a new, redesigned version of its website, <http://www.penninelancashirecommunityfarm.org>. Key features of the site include a cleaner and more attractive design, a more engaging user experience with enhanced dynamic content.

“We are excited to finally be able to provide a website that is not static, that gives people information about the full range of services we provide,” said James Horsford, the Manager of Pennine Lancashire Community Farm. “We know, from the many people we have worked with, how important it is for people’s wellbeing to engage with outdoor activities. It improves people’s self confidence, allows them to socialise and can give people new skills. So we are delighted that our new website shows the many different voluntary opportunities that we provide.”

The new site displays the extent of the voluntary opportunities Pennine Lancashire Community Farm offers, the duration and the facility for anyone interested in a particular opportunity to get in touch. Additionally the site shows the various educational packages from tasters to full programmes tailored for foundation stages to Key Stage 4, further and adult education, special educational needs and more specialist community groups. The educational packages are provided both on and off site.

Forest Schools are one of the education programmes offered by Pennine Lancashire Community Farm, “The Forest School is a fantastic learning environment,” said Catherine Boyle, of Burnley College, “with lots of fun activities that helped the students to remain interested.”

The website is available now and can be viewed equally on phones or computers.

About Pennine Lancashire Community Farm

Pennine Lancashire Community Farm was established in February 2002 and became a registered charity in February 2011. The charity was created following the riots in Burnley, to use the medium of outdoor space to bring people together. It works across Burnley and Pendle in areas of high deprivation, across a number of community garden sites, forestry areas and farms. The central aim of Pennine Lancashire Community Farm is to promote health, community cohesion and inclusion and economic wellbeing.
