

The Dallas Morning News

Grant S. Moise
Publisher

July 31, 2018

Religious Leaders in DFW,

I have asked my friends at Faith Forward Dallas and Thanks-Giving Square to help coordinate two meetings on August 29th where I am looking for feedback from religious leaders on how The Dallas Morning News can play a greater role in strengthening our community. I am in my first six months as the new Publisher of The Dallas Morning News and I have been conducting a Listening Tour of the area so I can learn the following:

- How is The Dallas Morning News doing covering the topics most important to your community?
- Where is our region at a unique inflection point where The Dallas Morning News can focus our editorial and news resources to help the leaders of DFW make the right decisions?
- Is there an opportunity for us to partner with you to help strengthen our community and make this a better place to live?

I will be joined in these meetings by Mike Wilson, Editor, and Brendan Minitier, Editor of Editorials. We are especially interested in feedback from this diverse group of religious leaders. We know that many issues our cities tackle today have faith-based leaders actively engaged in helping solve them. My hope is that by starting a dialogue, we can help provide greater visibility to the great things that are happening all around North Texas.

I hope you will join us for this Listening Tour event and will share your valuable feedback with us. Thank you in advance for taking time out of your busy schedule to help us strengthen North Texas through your feedback and dialogue.

Sincerely,

Grant Moise