

Replication

At Brooks Forgings we're involved in the replication of ironwork on a regular basis. The scale of the work involved can be from a simple railhead or scroll, to an entire panel of ironwork.

We can replicate items from old drawings or photos and have on-site tool room facilities to replicate, and produce, a set of forging dies from a sample component.

Using our 50 years experience in the industry, we have developed an extensive range of multi functional modern machinery that enables us to maximize production.

Turnaround for enquires is rapid, new tooling takes on average 3 to 4 weeks.

Please contact us today to discuss your upcoming replication or heritage projects.
