The Chocolate Challenge is a fun and different way to encourage team bonding and building. This exciting, slightly messy, challenge will be sure to get teams working together as they mix, make, decorate, package and market their very own chocolates. This unusual challenge provides a fun team work activity with tasty results that are guaranteed to get your mouth watering and your taste buds tingling!

What's involved?

Working in teams, the delegates are firstly provided with an introduction and overview to the event and then it's down to work to create and make a selection of chocolates.

As part of this, teams will need to plan their time carefully and watch their budget to ensure that they meet the required criteria.

In addition, they'll need to think about designing a marketing strategy to take into account the sector, pricing, promotion and brand and when requested, will need to present their ideas to the judges.

The end product produced by each team will be scored on quality, originality, team work, variety and effectiveness of the marketing plan. Presentations at the end of the session prove to be a hilarious and great end to the perfect team challenge.

The Chocolate Challenge is a fun activity that promotes team co-operation and communication and encourages a strong level of individual and team creativity.

Plus it provides teams with a hands-on experience for every one to get stuck into and enjoy and is a really different spin on traditional team building.

What have people said?

'It was a great event and enjoyed by all those who attended. What a creative and imaginative crowd'.
