It works!

Time and again our returning participants have told us how they could not have made the next step or been as successful in their job searches without the experience abroad. There is no doubt that an international programme makes you stand out from the crowd and gives your cv the boost that employers are looking for.

"My time abroad was invaluable, it's helped me hugely in gaining my current job as a digital recruiter in London as its an example to employers of ambition and life experience. The service offered by the Training Partnership was fantastic, from the organisation of my travel, work placement and living arrangements, to the consistent communication whilst I was on placement- always offering help and advice. This was an adventure I'll never forget, and I believe the experience of living and working abroad made me return a more mature person, giving me confidence in my future endeavours."

What happens next?

"My internship in 2014 single handedly opened up the opportunity to get my current position in the pharmaceutical industry. Without it I would not have been considered for my interview due to my lack of experience and since starting the role as a temp, I have now been employed permanently. Experiencing another country and another culture was fantastic. I would recommend it to anyone as I loved the internship and the number of pathways it opened for me is amazing!"

Alex Murray-Smith

Many of the jobs which I am interested in require demonstrable cultural awareness and experience of other cultures, as well as being able to adapt to new situations quickly - the placement in Germany has given me an advantage in that I have experienced these things in both a professional and more informal setting. The people I met were all fascinating and it has been great to see some of them again when I have returned for weekend visits.
