With the advent of smartphones and tablets in the enterprise market, we have also recognized the advent of a series of challenges, to be faced by companies to turn mobility from a concern into a competitive advantage. Today, CIO's are faced with issues such as device management, security of data and devices, strict policies, increasing costs but also the decisive power shifting from company to the user or employee. This set of challenges needs to be tackled in a structured and professional way to ensure that enterprise mobility becomes one of the key business drivers and gives your company competitive advantages in an ever increasing mobility world.

■ Interchange is a pioneer in Enterprise Mobility

Since 2008, it has assisted over 1000 companies with the structural approach of its Enterprise Mobility. We follow a certain development path, covering all aspects of the full mobility value chain. A path, proven to be successful for companies in a wide variety of industry sectors and governmental bodies.

At Interchange, we are convinced that a company needs to know what its mobility strategy needs to be, what steps need to be taken, which issues need to be tackled. Since a few years, we have been successfully deploying Enterprise Mobility Consultancy tracks, guiding a customer to make future-proof strategic choices regarding devices, applications, usability, company wide policies on mobility, employee benefits, cost management and more.

During the Enterprise Mobility Consultancy exercise, we gather key information through series of interviews with different team representatives in your company (Users, Business Domain Reps, IT Management, HR Management, General Management), analyse and compile existing documentation and policies (if available). Based on the info gathered, we generate an intermediate report that is challenged by the company's stakeholders in one or more moderated Group Sessions, in order to achieve common consensus on definitions, ambitions, short term and long term mobility strategies.
