Change of Head Office

Foremost Nigerian insurer, Consolidated Hallmark Insurance Plc has continued to make commendable moves geared towards a better operating environment for all- clients, staff and its operating environment inclusive. The company recently relocated its head office from 33D, Bishop Aboyade Cole Street, Victoria Island to a more spacious and centrally located address at Consolidated Hallmark House, 266, Ikorodu Road, Obanikoro Lagos.

Regulatory agencies including the National Insurance Commission (NAICOM) and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) have since been notified of the change. However, regular operations of the Energy & Special Risks as well as the Lekki/Victoria Island Business Units continue at the former head office location in Victoria Island, Lagos.

New website unveiled

In a bid to ensure a better platform for easy accessibility by clients, prospective clients and other visitors, the company has unveiled a redesigned website. The new site has a portal for electronic transactions, thus making it possible for smart card enabled payments.

It also provides a link for direct self help processing of insurance, especially the compulsory third party cover for motor vehicles. The company is renowned to have pioneered the on-line generation of the motor insurance certificate by clients who have been effecting payment with their interswitch enabled cards from a dedicated website www.motorthirdpartyonline.com

Company steps up CSR activities

The company, in addition to its continued efforts at ameliorating the living conditions of motherless babies at the Lekki Orphanage Home through regular donations of provisions and food items has recently extended the scope of Corporate Social Responsibility to the University of Calabar.

Recently, a borehole sponsored by Consolidated Hallmark Insurance was commissioned on behalf of the company by the Vice Chancellor, Professor James Epoke. The event coincided with the presentation of claims settlement cheques to families of three students who were involved in motor accidents.

Regional Director, East of the company, Mrs. Ijeoma Okoro, said the settlement of the claim on the institution's Group Personal Accident Insurance policy that covers students of Center for Educational Services serves to correct the erroneous impression that insurance companies do not pay claims to their customers.

The vice-chancellor commended the company for the claims settlement, a development which negates the erroneous impression of people that insurers renege on their responsibilities to clients when claims occur.
